A: I think the issue is with the spaces in the path. The Unmovable "S" I'm angry, sad, full of hurt and longing. I don't know how to explain what I am feeling except to say that I'm angry at this world in which my beloved and I can't be together. My son's illness, his incredible treatment, his life-threatening complications, the financial drain, the isolation and the division has destroyed me and I can't figure out how to mend the pieces. My son, who spent many months making a small, bright hole of hope inside of me, does not exist anymore. He is gone. Gone in a world of sick people, hungry people, strangers far more distant and complicated than any relationship I ever cared to have. I want to heal but I'm too busy running in place; I can't stop because I don't know where to start. I'm the ocean and I'm the shore that my son was supposed to be. I'm big and I'm wide and the grief that flayed me has burned holes in my heart that won't heal. I can't stop crying because I don't know who to call. I don't know what I can do because the people I need to talk to are either so far away from me or are so busy that they never will be. I am the author of my own misery and I have no one to blame but myself. I don't know how to get through the pain. I don't know what to expect. I have no idea if I can go to another clinic so my son can die; I don't know what to do with all of the medications and fluids and blood; I don't know how to take care of a child who struggles to eat, has confusion, takes a few moments to learn and then forgets what was learned; I don't know how to take care of a child who has been hospitalised nine times in the last month; I don't know how to take care of a child who has lost weight, has swelling and whose veins are swollen and cannot be put into a catheter. I need to be able to fix this. I need to do something. We are at a place of so much that needs to be done and I can't do it. I can't do it in the way I was meant to do it; I can't do it in the way that I know, in f678ea9f9e
